Bowens Generation X flash heads

The next generation in studio lighting

The origins of Bowens go back more than 90 years to 1923. The company was originally founded in London as a camera repair business, which by the '50s had grown to be one of the largest in Europe.

Bowens' first flash bulb units were produced in 1947 and by 1950 the company started to produce the first electronic studio flash systems.

Investing heavily in research and development, Bowens led the way in photographic lighting's electrical and mechanical design, leading to a product that would completely transform photographic studios.

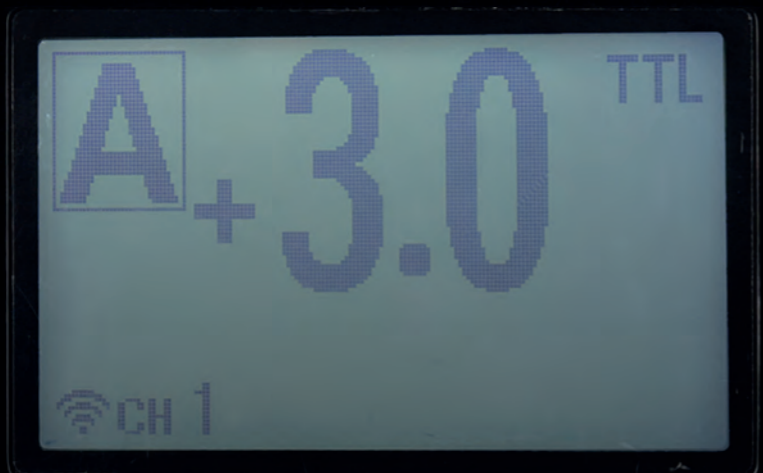

After a brief hiatus from 2017 to 2019, Bowens is back with same passion for development and drive to make quality, professional products.

Which Bowens is right for you?

This can depend significantly on your needs, on questions like how much flash power you desire and how fast you need to be able to shoot. Whether you're in a safe, controlled studio environment or capturing fast action on location, there's a Bowens flash head for you.

2-year limited warranty on selected products

Collapsible Reflectors

Calumet Reflectors and holders

This system features collapsible, round reflectors that are extremely versatile and portable. Choose from three types, each available in a range of different sizes.

The diffusers, as the name suggests, offer a soft diffused light. The two-sided gold-silver/white reflectors offer neutral white or warming options. The silver/white reflectors provide a choice of neutral white and efficient silver. Reversible covers with black, silver, white and gold are also available - these are ideal when on location where the changing natural light means you need to have a variety of options.

Create your own studio

with Calumet background paper

Calumet's background paper has a high-quality, fine-tooth, non-reflecting surface for enhancing photography. Just add a background stand and these rolls instantly become sweeps. Each roll is wound on a tough, rigid core for extra support. Calumet background paper is wrapped in a plastic sleeve to trap out moisture and dirt, then packed in a sturdy tube or carton for maximum protection during shipping.
